CHAPTER VI--(Continued)

Camilla frowned again, this time sharply; she was shielding her face with her two hands; she had expected the usual tirade; not this. "Horace had given her away! How mean of him! She had never supposed that he would have confided in Violet.

"I am so sorry," the began, and then she stopped with a quick sigh. She was so weary, so unutterably weary, of this kind of thing! There came upon her a reckless sort of desire to speak out freely, as men do this world, as the other ends of the earth, or to confide; the latter from choice.

"I don't think you know what it means to me," said Violet Lancing, getting agitated. "If Horace had told me about your letter when he came in the summer, he should have promised him to lend you that money. I only found it out by chance the other day, and I must say I am surprised. Camilla, that you should have gone to Horace for help. You know perfectly well that we have the hardest work to get along on what we have. I just now think I suppose does a lot for us," here the speaker laughed shortly. "As he almost ruined himself over Ned, you see, he has no money to give away to the rest of the family."

"I am naturally Ned's widow and child-free; are eating him out of house and home," Camilla said. She had grown pale. Except on occasions like this, she never spoke her dead husband's name.

"I am not troubling about that, Camilla. You have a right to be provided for, especially as Ned treated you so badly. But you ought to manage better, and I can only repeat that you are not in a position to be independent. You are advanced you a hundred pounds last August, and you promised him to let me have some of the money at once."

Camilla stood by the window, flicking the long curtains.

This subject, and the recrimination it provoked, made every nerve in her tingle, and for a moment the consciousness of this personal difficulty with money, the ugliness of money itself, settled on her spirit, crushing it down as by some actual physical effort.

The spell of ease and relief that Horace's generosity had signified had been very brief. After a good deal of deliberation she had filled in the blank check for a thousand pounds.

Her inclination and her necessity had both urged her to make it three times that sum, but she had been temperate, feeling the need of caution. The check had gone to her before the day was over, and presently she had drawn very largely against it. She dared not drain the money in its entirety, otherwise she would leave herself unprotected should the evil she feared (meet which she had borrowed this sum) fall upon them.

In this latter position, she had dealt only with those things that were disagreeably prominent . . . and she had absolutely forgotten her obligation to her brother-in-law. She regretted now, impatiently enough, that she had not drawn Haover Haverford's name on the instrument. It would have given Violet even a portion of this debt, she would leave herself without a penny of ready money once more.

Mrs. Horace Lancing was continuing to press the matter home in an argumentative manner. She was determined to give Violet even a portion of this debt, she would leave herself without a penny of ready money once more.

Mrs. Horace Lancing was continuing to press the matter home in an argumentative manner. She was determined to give Violet even a portion of this debt, she would leave herself without a penny of ready money once more.

It suddenly dawned upon Camilla that her brother-in-law must have passed through an exceedingly unpleasant time.

"Poor Horace!" she said to herself. He was the only member of her husband's family who had shown her a particle of sympathy, and she felt horribly sorry in this moment that she should have trespassed so heavily on that sympathy.

"You are very angry with me, and you are talking a lot of nonsense," said Camilla.

She let the curtain slip from her fingers.

"Look here, Violet, I can't possibly do anything now, really I can't; but at least I promise faithfully."

Mrs. Horace laughed.

"At Christmas! Oh, yes! And when Christmas comes it will be, 'Violet dear, I am so very sorry, but can you possibly wait till Easter?' Oh, know!"

There were two bright patches of unbecoming color on her cheeks; she was adjusting her veil with hands that trembled.

"You have no right to say that sort of thing!" said Camilla, hotly; "It is very unjust and very untrue."

"And you have no right to go home, my husband, and leave from under my roof," said Violet Lancing. Her pale eyes looked very angry. "If you wanted money so badly you might have asked grandpa. I think, or some other husband," said Violet Lancing. "I am afraid it is a very sorry state of affairs, but I don't care about it. We have all sorts of worries ourselves, and the boys cost us no end of money, but you are just Ned all over again."

Camilla! Everything you want you must have, without considering any one or anything but yourself. I used to think the old trouble was Ned's fault, and I was awfully sorry when you were left to fight for yourself, but now I know better!"

"Is all this necessary?" Camilla asked in a low voice.

But Mrs. Horace was wound up.

"I can't help it. You've brought it on yourself, and you ought to hear the truth now and again. You're not only horribly selfish, you're as decentful as you can be . . . You can't pretend so easily with me, Camilla!"

I know perfectly well that your life isn't dull and miserable as you try to make it appear. And I am awfully sorry why you never want any of us to come here unawares."

She jerked her veil down over her chin and tore it off. "I am not a fool," she finished, with a hard laugh, "though you may think me a fool."

"You are very angry with me, and you are talking a lot of nonsense," said Camilla.

are highly prized by the winning crews. The four classes are included the State-named armament cruiser, the steel Varnish Marquise type, which there are now eight in commission in the Pacific fleet. The battleship trophy is at present in possession of the Illinois of the Atlantic fleet, one of the four of Admiral Evans' fleet which have thirteen-inch guns in their main batteries as against the high-caliber twelve-inch rifles of the more modern ships. The Maryland has just made a record of 75.39 per cent. of hits at the targets and the naval enthusiasts are already anticipating her the winner of the trophy in advance of the work of any of the ships of the big battle fleet.

The cruiser trophy is now in possession of the crew of the protected cruiser.

Albany is in San Diego harbor, and has just returned from Magdalena with what is conceded to be a world's record for rapid and accurate firing. The trophy was won last year by the Albany's crew while they were on the Boston, which is now in out-of-commission.

There seems little doubt that the Albany will retain the trophy, and the crew already is celebrating.

The gunboat trophy is possessed by the Princeton, and the destroyer trophy by the Oregon. On each of the twelve plaques, which bear designs of naval vessels in heavy seas, or gun crews in action, is the inscription.

"Trophy for excellence naval gunnery."

Presented by the direction of the President of the United States to the gunners making the highest score in record target practice."

Each year the name of the winning ship is engraved on the trophy.

CRUISER AFTER SUPPLIES.

South Dakota, from Magdalena, reported by Wireless that She Brings Dead Sailor for Burial.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS--P.M.)

SAN DIEGO, March 12--Wireless messages received here tonight state the new armed cruiser South Dakota, Capt. Fox, which has been on a shutdown trip to Magdalena Bay, will arrive here tomorrow morning, bringing for burial the body of a member of her crew, who died at Magdalena.

The messages did not state the identity of the dead sailor. The interment will be made at the naval cemetery on Point Loma reservation, where the Bennington dead were buried several years ago.

The crew, one of Admiral Evans's supply ships, reported by wireless to-night that she was within a short distance of San Diego, and would be in the harbor tomorrow morning, on several tons of stores for the vessel's return to San Diego. Most of the stores to be shipped from here will consist of fresh fruits, meats and vegetables.

DESIGN OF NEW FLAG.

Official Announcement Made of Arrangement of Stars Changed by Administration of Oklahoma.

(BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)

WASHINGTON, March 12--(Exclusive Dispatch.) The War Department orders today a description of the new United States flag, and a diagram of the arrangement of the stars is printed.

The field, or union, of the national flag in use in the army will from and after July 4, 1908, consist of forty-six stars in six rows, the first, third, fourth and sixth rows to have eight stars and the second and fifth rows seven stars each, a design which is to be adopted by the War Department.

Many designs have been submitted to the War Department for the new flag, with artistic and "freak" arrangements of the stars which have been considered by the committee.

The design adopted is the simplest possible.

CRUISER BETTERS CONTRACT.

BOSTON, March 12--The scout cruiser Birmingham completed her four hours' endurance trial off Boston lightship this afternoon, having maintained an average of 34.32 knots an hour. Her contract requirements called for an average of 34.5 knots.

on deposit in the Scheeline bank of this city, where the stock is now held in escrow. The remainder of the money is on its way from New York, and the controlling interest will be delivered immediately upon the arrival of the balance of the coin.

For several days this big deal, one of the most important in the history of the country, has been in progress. Meyers and Murphy originally owned 600 shares of the stock. They succeeded in getting a directors' meeting at Goldfield Saturday, and at that time 300 shares were voted from the treasury to be paid at a price in proportion to the total of the coin.

It is said here on the basis of authority that the purchase was made by Murphy and Meyers for Gates, for the purpose of turning the Combination Association over to the Goldfield Consolidated, thus making the merger by far the biggest mining combination ever carried through in Nevada, and giving that company control of practically all the biggest mines in the Goldfield district.

FUGITIVE'S WIFE TESTIFIES.

Mr. John Dalzell Robertson Near Colapse on Leaving Grand Jury Room.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.] SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] This was a dry day in the grand case, as the affidavit mill was not running, and the hearing in court was tame and destitute of anything spectacular. Abe Ruef's attempts to gain his liberty on bail were unsuccessful. Judge Lawlor was willing to accept bail at any time on the case pending in his court, but there were two obstacles which prevented Ruef's attorneys from putting their plans through. The prosecution had failed to determine which of the indictments were duplicates, and Judge Dooling, sitting for Judge Dunne in the Tavis Heel case, refused to take any action, either to dismiss the extortion indictments or to accept bail on the case in that department.

The extortion case in Judge Dunne's court was continued by Judge Dooling until Saturday, and it is likely, unless Ruef's attorneys appeal to a higher court for an order compelling Judge Dunne to sit in the case, he will at least spend his nights behind the prison walls at Ingleside until that time.

The proceedings in Judge Lawlor's case disclosed nothing more than a mass of verbiage on both sides, and the monotony of the technical dialogue was relieved only once, when Ach and Heney exchanged compliments in a somewhat heated manner.

Ach, Dist.-Atty., told O'Gara to do such and such a thing. Heney hotly denied that he ever instructed O'Gara to do anything, considering him his equal and not at all inferior to himself.

"I don't know that he is your equal," said Ach, sarcastically.

"What you think of me is immaterial," replied Heney, "because your opinion is not worth anything."

Judge Lawlor prevented the lawyers from proceeding any further by commanding both to observe the dignity of the Superior Court.

A comment made by Judge Dooling when Ach appealed to have Ruef's case dismissed in Dunne's court created some surprise.

"There is no doubt that in time those cases will be dismissed, the Supreme Court having decided that the industry in which the defendant is engaged is a lawful one," commented Dooling.

There is no doubt, according to the attitude of Judge Lawlor, who informed both sides today that, unless good reason was shown to the contrary, he would expect all the affidavits in his case to be dismissed.

WASHINGTON.
LILLEY SHY
ON EVIDENCE.

at He Stands Pat on His Accusations.

akes Long Statement Before Committee.

fluence Used to Get Submarine Contracts.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-P.M.]
WASHINGTON, March 12.—The submarine boat inquiry was begun earnestly today by a special House committee. Beginning at 10 o'clock, the committee continued its work during the greater part of the day. Representative Lilley was heard at length, began his testimony by reading a typewritten statement, a part of which was in the nature of an affidavit, in which he outlined his charges.

Detail. When he had completed his formal presentation, he was questioned at length by Representative members of the committee, who was seated by Chairman Boutell to form that service.

During the afternoon session, Representative Richmond P. Hobson testified he had been approached by a man representing the Electric Boat Company, who told him that he would support the claims of that company before Congress, the company could influence to bear upon Speaker Cannon to have him (Hobson) appointed to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

At the suggestion of Chairman Boutell the names of the attorneys representing interested parties were entered upon the record.

Mr. Lilley informed Frank T. Brown of Norwich and State Senator Charles Judson of Bridgeport, C. as his counsel. Martin W. Littleton of New York announced that John D. Lindsey, of New York and himself represented the Electric Boat Company.

In reply to one of Mr. Olmstead's questions, Mr. Lilley said the Electric Boat Company had no plans and no desire to dominate that that company had built boats, it only built them to secure contracts for boats and then submit the contracts.

Mr. Lilley gave the names of the Connecticut manufacturer and the attorney he had retained him, according to his statement, to vote in an application for submarine boat legislation. The manufacturer, he said, were Franklin H. Taylor of Waterbury and A. M. Ferris of the Bridgeport Trade Company, the attorney was the King of Waterbury.

ENGLISH COMPANY PROFITS.

Mr. Lilley said it was his understanding there was an agreement between the Electric Boat Company and "Sister" Sons &amp; Maxim of England, they are building English marine boats, thereby all the improvements made by the Electric Boat Company are turned over to the English company, but under which all of the improvements made by Vickers' Sons &amp; Maxim are given to the Electric Boat Company.

A dimension arose between Mr. Olmsted and Mr. Lilley over that portion of Mr. Lilley's statement relating to newspaper correspondents and the part they have taken in creating what Mr. Lilley termed a sentiment for submarine, particularly on the Pacific Coast.

"While," he said, "I have no direct testimony to offer on that subject, I am told that they (the Electric Boat Company) have men who attend meetings of Board of Trade, who are of their meetings and make addresses on the unpreparedness of the Pacific Coast and the fear that the Japanese will be over the next boat and thus over resolutions passed instructing their agents to vote for large amounts of money as the best way of protecting them from invasion. I find it reprehensible conduct on the part of the company to hire lawyers and newspaper men to go about and spread war stories and work through their agents to bring pressure to bear on members of the House to vote the government's money for their boats."

Mr. Lilley said he could only name two newspaper men at this time who had worked for the Electric Boat Company, and he believes the names of two who he had admitted having worked for the company.

Mr. Lilley insisted that if the committee would call the witnesses whose names he had given it would ascertain that there were a great many more who had worked for the company and that a great deal of money had been spent that way.

"The air is full of it," he said.

During his examination, Mr. Lilley mentioned that he had come into contact with former Senator Thurman, who is the attorney here for the Lake Submarine Boat Company, but insisted that that gentleman had not formulated his (Lilley's) charges.

HOBSON'S TESTIMONY.

Congressman Hobson testified that Lawrence Speer of New York told him last November that the Electric Boat Company could be able to help Hobson to get a place on the Naval Committee if he "stood right on submarines."

Mr. Hobson said: "I told Mr. Speer that I did not want the influence that his company had, and I made no promise to support any naval proposition he might have to make."

Mr. Hobson said he had seen Mr. Speer since this conversation occurred, and, in reply to a question propounded by Mr. Littleton, said he and Mr. Speer had been classmates at Annapolis, and that they had belonged to the same class in that school.

Mr. Hobson was recalled. He was questioned by Mr. Olmsted regarding the statement he made to the committee that he was being shadowed by detectives, and was asked if they were following him in his work before the committee.

"I have had a very large number of men shadowing me since the resolution was introduced," said Mr. Lilley. "One man has been standing near my door daily in the office building, and two more usually at the entrance. Frequently I have run into three here. At the hotel there have never been less than three, so the house detective tells me. The detective station at the House of Representatives says there have been at least six in the house, but they did not protest against this procedure, until they began to shadow my family, and Maj. Sylvester, the Chief of Police here, told me he would have them arrested if I so desired."

Mr. Lilley was asked if the committee to the fact that his charges do not embrace the accusation or inference that any member of Congress had been actually bribed or knowingly participated in or been influenced by written offer on the part of the Electric Boat Company to secure a nomination. His purpose, he said, was not to foot and assist the carrying

TILLMAN IS NOT SATISFIED.

Gets After Cortelyou and the New York Banks.

Offers Sweeping Resolution for Committee Report.

Senator Promises to Follow It With Speech.

IBY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The hearing of Secretary Cortelyou and the national banks of New York City was resumed in the Senate this afternoon by Mr. Tillman, who said that he had at various times in Congress to get a probe into the Treasury Department.

He said he had offered many resolutions calling for information and all of them had been pigeon-holed. He announced his intention of making more effort, and he expressed the hope that Senator Aldrich will not be so suspicious of his attempt to obtain light. Mr. Tillman then offered this far-reaching and sweeping resolution:

"That the Committee on Finance is hereby requested to report: 'First, whether the National banks in the city of New York and elsewhere are in the habit, under the guise of commercial loans, of furnishing funds for speculative enterprises, and if so what legislation is necessary to prevent a continuation of such practices. The national banks are now engaged by themselves or through other organizations, in attempting to control the legislation of Congress on currency matters; to ascertain what, if any, legislation is necessary to prevent the habit of persons holding the office of Comptroller of the Currency from making that office a stepping-stone to employment by national banks.'

Senator Aldrich announced that he will take this resolution as a text for his speech to be delivered next Monday on the Aldrich financial bill.

Dawes Bill and Bradley Bill Granting Wholesale Pensions, Are Defeated in Committee.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-A.M.]

WASHINGTON, March 12.—By a tie vote the motion was lost today in the House Committee on Military Affairs to report favorably the Dawes bill creating a roll to be known as the volunteered retired list and placing therein with retired pay, the surviving volunteer officers of the army, navy and marine corps of the Civil War. Estimates indicated that the first year's operation of such a law would cost the government $11,000,000.

The committee similarly failed to act favorably on the Bradley bill, which, in addition to the provisions of the Dawes bill, proposed the payment of pensions to the surviving volunteer man in lieu of pensions now being drawn. The committee estimated that the operation of such a law would cost the government $11,000,000.

"Don't let them worry you," Camilla said to Katherine. "Dennis will take them off your hands."

However, it seemed that Miss Granville had no intention of calling Dennis to the rescue, so Mrs. Lanceing went downstairs, and wore a very triumphant expression as she entered the drawing room.

"Well, I don't think you ought to be happy with the children," she declared. "You ought to be pleased, Agnes. You pretended you were sorry for her. Come, I'll give you the sense of existence that she has had in Mrs. Bayhursh's house. Well, here at least she will be treated like a human being." Then abruptly Camilla crossed the room and sat down at her writing-table. "I have a note to write to Mr. Haverford," she said, "and then I hope you will be satisfied, you dear old fatigued frump."

The note written, she had it dispatched by a cab, and requested that an maid might bring it back.

"I don't see what earthly objection she can have," Camilla said, "but if he has any—well, now let him speak or forever hold his peace."

"Good heavens, why not?" exclaimed Camilla. "Bring back the flowers," she ordered to the maid who appeared at the door at this moment. She got up and began to arrange the room in some fashion, unlocking drawers, and taking up the things she had hidden. "I really don't know what Mr. Haverford has to do with it," she said irritably, after awhile.

"Don't you?" queried Mrs. Brenton, with a smile. "You must remember that Miss Granville went to him last night for advice."

Camilla moved impatiently.

"Oh, he will take a month to deliberate. He is so slow. Really I must have some one for the children, and Miss Granville wants me. Why should she not come to me?"

"I don't like things done in a great hurry," said Mrs. Brenton. "And then again, 'I may annoy Mr. Haverford,' she said, again. "I may annoy him."

"And what do I care if it does?" exclaimed Camilla. She was nervous, and it did her good to speak sharply.

"Anyhow, I have practically arranged the girl, and I set her to—what we would call—terms and other things last afternoon. I like her, Agnes. She is a lady, and I think she is just the very thing we want for Betty."

As the children were brought in and placed, Mrs. Lanceing ordered tea.

"Tell cook to send up all sorts of things," she said. "I am ravenous. How much do you think I ought to give her?" was her next question.

"Fifty pounds a year?"

"My dear, I said," said Mrs. Brenton, and then she sighed. "Then will you tell me the value of money?"

"Well, look here," said Camilla, sitting down on the stool, and putting a pencil to her voice, "will you arrange all this for me? I don't want to let this girl slip through my fingers."

She looked over her shoulder at this time; the door was half open, and they caught the sound of the children returning.

"Well, have you been good little people?" she called aloud, and she got up quickly and went to the door. "I hope you are not tired, Miss Granville? Oh, my dear! What are you doing? You must not carry that big, big lump!"

Baby had climbed up into Katherine's arms, and had her arms about the girl's neck, her head was cuddled on Katherine's shoulder.

"I am awful tired, mummy," she said plaintively. Then Betty chimed in.

"I told her a heap of times she was to ask poor Katherine Granville to come over but—with a shrug of her shoulders—"you know what Baby is. The most obstinate creature in the world."

But Baby only smiled, and kissed her.

Her mother tried to entice her away, she clung to the girl affectionately. So Camilla went up to the nursery, also scolding tenderly at the baby.

She wanted to take Miss Granville

EXCITEMENT IS SUBSIDING.

Japanese Government Urged by Tokyo Press not to Force China to Extremes.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.] TOKIO, March 12.—The demand of the press and the public of Japan for aggressive action against China for connection with the Taku affair, is subsiding.

The Asahi, one of the most influential newspapers, discusses the matter at length and urges the government to seriously consider the moral side of the case, and not to press China to extremes. It thinks that Japan should accept a general signature concerning the export of arms, destined for the use of insurgents against a friendly government.

The sentiment gathered from the Foreign Office supports the suggestion that Great Britain is urging an armistice, settlement, and calling upon the moral obligation of Japan toward China. The Foreign Office asserts that no ultimatum has been issued in the matter, but the belief is expressed that the negotiations may be protracted.

In well informed circles it is asserted that China will eventually agree to the demands of Japan in consideration of a pledge upon the part of Japan that a closer watch will be kept upon the importation of arms.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Fire Inspector Porter said yesterday at the name of Los Angeles has become a byword all along the Coast by reason of the number of changes made in the building and fire ordinances: he demands strongly the bill district out of a fire limit.

The Finance Committee of the Council will recommend that $250,000 be set aside for permanent improvements in the fire department.

Building Inspector Mackie inspected

number of schools yesterday, looking for fire traps: he says the buildings are well protected, but will recom-

end a number of new stairways and etc.

Mrs. Evangelina Nichols was yesterday permitted by Judge Rivers to see her stepdaughter, Eldora E.

Nichols, whom her dead father's estate, Mrs. Lillian O. Clark, sought to

to from the first named.

Miss Ruby Casselman was released from the County Jail yesterday, as a District Attorney accepted Mr. and Mr. H. W. Martin on the no bond fixed on the second forgery

against lodged against her.

Judge Rivers intimated yesterday that he will permit Mrs. G. A. Bousman to withdraw her waiver of administration

on her dead husband's estate, in view of Dr. D. W. Boen's

similar afternoon at 2 o'clock for arrests. Casselman is to trial yesterday before Judge Conroy for alleged illegal registration at Ocean Park, may be paroled if convicted.

The jury trial of Michael McKernan's

no damage suit against the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company began

before Judge Smith's court yesterday.

Judge Monroe yesterday dismissed

an application for a garnishee

on Mrs. Priest's, and admitted Nichols

waiver's will to probate.

The temporary restraining order is in favor of H. C. Millsap and others, sign James decided yesterday, shall be continued and an injunction pan-

elite issued against an undertaking

by G. Baker, manager of the Standard Oil Company, was yesterday before the Los Angeles

Gas and Electric Company, was arraigned in the Court yesterday on a charge of

pany and selling them to an express

ON FIRE LIMITS.

Inspector Porter Says Name of

Los Angeles Has Become a By-

word All Along Coast Because

There Are so Many Changes in Building and Fire Zone Ordinances.

Los Angeles has become a byword

all along the Coast by reason of its mediocrity with its building ordinances and fire limits. Your city gets more advertising than any other.

The option was assumed by Chief Inspector Porter of the Pacific Fire Investigation Bureau, to a number of Coun-councilmen respecting the latest change in the building and the suggested modifications in the building laws.

Mr. Porter is here for the purpose of learning, if possible, what the Coun-council proposes to do in regard to increasing the number of fire houses and the fire apparatus. He says that he is interested in the question of fire limits

for the reason that it plays a considerable part in fixing insurance rates.

"Los Angeles makes more changes in the fire building ordinance than any of the other large cities on the Coast together," says Mr. Porter. "In most of the cities the fire limits are fixed by charter, and it requires a charter amendment to change them."

Every time there is a change there is an insurance press all over the country, and as your changes are generally modifications reducing the limits the comments are unfavorable. This must have a tendency to influence investigators.

There has been a general comment

about the City Hall during the last two weeks that the Council's action in taking the hill section north of First avenue was the most important in the city.

Mr. Porter is studying carefully

the ordinance cutting the hill district

out of the fire district. He has discovered that it represents a successful

attempt at log-rolling in the Council.

There is a fraternal order that deserves a number of buildings in the district, and a number of owners of wooden lodges have already classed as fire traps, desire to make some alterations in the buildings.

These are the reasons assigned by the Councilmen for modifying the ordinances. They say that they expect to extend the fire limits to Bunker Hill avenue again by September 1.

The Mayor has asked the fire chief and the inspector of buildings to further his will written report and forth on the changes.

Building Inspector Mackie submitted

his report yesterday. It condemns strongly the action of the Council in setting down the bars; he says that the district becomes a menace

to the city.

When we were fixing fire limits

the last time," said Mr. Buckus, yesterday, the commission favored extending them to Figueroa street. That recommendation was made by the politicians who had not got the power to have their pull to have the district stop at Bunker Hill avenue.

This took place under a former

Council. I still think that the limits

should extend west to Figueroa

street; it was a great disappointment

to me to see the district cut down again. I do not mean to criticizes them.

ing standing could make needed

The Amalgamated has commenced

drilling two wells on the edge of the large tract just west of its old hold-officers and agents on which it has the oil rights. This is the first exploration made on this land.

The Rancho La Brea Oil Company

has twelve wells pumping and three strings running. These are down over 800 feet, and are expected to go 1,500.

The older wells, located half a mile northwest, are 1,000 to 1,500.

The American Petroleum Company,

headed by E. L. Doherty, has three wells under way on an eighty-acre tract near the Amalgamated.

The Twenty-five Oil Company is company and land over which occurred

the famous midnight battle participated in the San Joaquin which two men were wounded and have since been suing in the courts

for damages.

PRICES OF REFINED OIL.

Nine and 5 cents are ruling prices for engine distillates Nos. 1 and 2 respectively. This is about the same as for many months past. Stove fuel is about 5 cents, the leading marketers

not raising the rate, although the demand is much greater than it was owing to its extensive displacement of wood and coal within the last year.

Gasoline ranges from 17 to 17½ cents

a gallon. Diesel is still higher. There is no tendency to cut prices, the standard having practically ceased to stand upon the independents.

It will be his first visit to this State, and is regarded as the most important event in the history of the State lodges.

Mr. Barnes is not only the head of 700,000 knights scattered throughout the world, but is also commander-in-chief of the Uniform Rank of America, which includes 100,000 men who have been mustered into the service of the United States army; each qualified to act as an officer in a volunteer regiment in time of war.

When he arrived from San Francisco, the grand secretary of the State lodges, announcing that the head of the international organization would visit Los Angeles, preparations were made under the direction of Hugh J. Crawford, district deputy grand chancellor, to provide a fitting welcome.

Mr. Crawford announced yesterday that a reception committee will meet the dignitary at the train and escort him to the Alameda. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Barnes, and it is expected that Grand Chancellor M. L. Short will form one of the party.

On Monday evening there will be a parade of knights, air knights and ladies, and a military band will lead the line of march, which will start at 8 o'clock. The procession will pass from First to Broadway, Broadway to Sixth, Sixth to South Spring, where the Knights of Pythian Hall, where the reception and secret exercises will be held.

They wouldn't think of using ordinary laundry soap, or washing powder, or chemicals.

Former Judge W. H. Morris, an official of the Los Angeles District Court of Appeals, will deliver the address of welcome and Supreme Chancellor Barnes will respond.

Gantlet Lodge, No. 125, will hold its annual convention at the hall, and admission will be controlled especially to knights having the password.

The local knights are planning other entertainments for their chief officer, but will wait until his arrival before making any definite arrangements.

The committee appointed by District Deputy Grand Chancellor Crawford are: Arrangements, W. R. Myers; A. L. Weston, J. C. Keif; Hall, H. C. White, R. L. Dunlap, E. R. Clutter; Reception, W. P. Hunt, E. R. Pendleton; Finance, F. T. Richardson, E. J. Mord, L. H. Denney; press, R. L. Dunlap and Thornton Alexander.

Three-Day Session and Discuss the Needs of the Tribes and the Probable Best Methods of Accomplishing What is Desired.RIVERSIDE, March 12.—Invitations will be sent out in a few days for a State conference of the heads of Indian tribes, known educators and philanthropists to be held in Riverside April 22, 23 and 26. The object of this conference, which promises to be of national interest, is the discussion of plans for the betterment of the western Indians and securing for them a "square deal" at the hands of the government.This conference will be brought about principally through the efforts of Dr.
David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University; Dr. Williams, a former Congregational minister; Dr. George L. Spilling, special representative of the Department of Indian Affairs; Harwood Hall, superintendent of Sherman Institute; Frank A. Miller, president of the Ojaiwood Foun-

of the chiefs of the Southern California Indian tribes, probably in their native costumes, will be one of the picturesque features of the conference. In this way a study can be made at the meeting by actual contact with the Indians and by contact with those who come most intimately in touch with them. It is hoped eventually to make this conference an annual affair.

CITY SALOON FIGHT OVER.

A large delegation of citizens waited upon the City Trustees last night, and the saloon fight in this city was settled satisfactorily. It was decided that:
an ordinance shall be passed closing all saloons on Sundays. The licenses shall be $300 per year, instead of $600,
and with the express provision that saloons only be run under these conditions. As fast as the saloons are forced to quit business under these conditions, no new licenses are to be granted until the number has been reduced from sixteen to eight.The fight in this city was at the sugges-

CLOG IN DRAIN.

SEEK TO BLOCK CITY'S BUYING.SEWER FARM PROJECT AT-TACKED IN SANTA ANA.City Trustees is Called Upon to Produce Documents Having to Do
With the Purchase of the Property.
Refuses to Do so on Ground That Papers Are in Trust.SANTA ANA, March 12.—A suit brought to attack the city's contract to purchase 125 acres as an addition to its sewer works was begun this afternoon, when City Trustees J. W. Harris was called upon to produce documents having to do with the purchase of the property. Harris, who is president of the Abstract and Title Company, refused to produce any documents having to do with the consent of the men concerned. He said that the paper was filed with his attorneys as trustee. He said he had the privilege of telling who form the syndicate and how much was paid for the land, but Attorneys Keach and Bishop, who represent the taxpayers fighting the city's contract, did not present him for answer.The complaint charges that C. L.
Flack conspired to sell the 125 acres to the city, but today's examination of Harris showed that the City Council considers the purchase as adverse to
it. It is in opposition with the attorneys Keach and Bishop.Attorneys Keach and Bishop brought out the point that the City Council had purchased the property without consulting an engineer or any one else concerned in the addition to the sewer farm purposes. Harris said it was purchased on the judgment of the City Council after several trips of inspection.

MAN AND STOCK GO.

Word was received here today from Ed Levingood, a well-known horse and cattle man, one of the men who ran horses in the Tournament of Roses
and raced to a record of success.
One of his horses had disappeared and with him went seventy head of cattle and seventy head of horses. The foreman and stock were left on one of Levingood's Nevada ranches five months ago and Levingood had just made up with his son. On his return there he found the ranch deserted.
